6.0. Footnotes

0. The purpose of this paper is to analyze syntactically a Trique text<sup>1</sup> according to the analysis made by Robert E. Longacre.<sup>2</sup> The paper will deal with the clause, the phrase, and the sentence in Trique.

1.0 The Clause.

There are three main types of clauses in Trique. These are the predication clause, the equation clause and the observation clause. Of these three, only the first two will be discussed in this paper because only the first two are found in this particular text.

1.1 The Predication Clause.

The predication clause consists of a nuclear grameme which is the predicate (P) and orbital gramemes such as actor (A)  $\pm$  other gramemes: Goal (G), Spatial (S), Time (T) and Instrument (I). The actor grameme is always in 1st orbit from the predicate grameme. It may either precede or follow the predicate but always occurs contiguous to the predicate grameme. Other gramemes occur in outer orbits more removed from the predicate grameme.

1.1.1 Predication clauses in which the actor grameme follows the predicate grameme without any other grameme preceding the predicate.

1.1.1.1 Predicate - actor.

The predicate (P) - actor (A) contains a predicate grameme which is manifested by a verb (V) or a verb phrase (V phrase):

e.g.       $gi^3 ni^3 i^3 zo^2$       page 3 line 5
             P(O)      A(Pronoun)
             "saw he"

$^3 ci^21 \quad ^4 ne^3 34h \quad zo^2$       page 5 line 6
             P(V phrase)      A(Pronoun)
             "inquired he"

and an actor grameme which is manifested by a noun (N) (including the subtypes independent pronoun (pr) and fused pronouns (tone substitution) or a noun phrase (N phrase) e.g.

na<sup>3</sup>we<sup>3</sup>na<sup>3</sup>wi<sup>3</sup>      žu<sup>3</sup>      page 1      line 12
                  P(V)      A(N)

 P(N) P(V<sub>A</sub> (pr) (nga) H(N. phrase) "With my burro"
                     H List H Page 3, Line 1

2.2 The verb phrase may occur in the predicate grameme as the nucleus of the Predication Clause, the copulative grameme as the nucleus of the equation clause and the process grameme as the nucleus of the observation clause. In this particular text we only find it occurring in the predicate grameme and the copulative grameme e.g.

$na^3wi^3$   $ni^4ah^4$   $su^3$

The verb phrase in Trigue may consist of an auxiliary-main construction, a main-modifier construction, or a Qualifier, Head construction

2.2.1 The auxiliary-main construction

This construction contains an auxiliary element which is a verb and a main element which is a verb. eg.

$ga^3h$  [  $ga^3ah^{3-4}$  ]  $ga^3ne^3$  "went sat" Page 2, line 11
 Aux. (v) M (v)

2.2.2. The Qualifier-Head Construction

This construction contains a Qualifier (Q) element which is either a negative or a numeral and a Head which when it occurs with a qualifier which is a negative is a verb and when it occurs with a qualifier which is a numeral may be a verb or a verb phrase.

3 4      3 3-4

uta    diga<sup>o</sup>    yp<sup>o</sup>ph      "much deceived"      page 4      line 7
(num.)      (V phrase)
Q            H

2.3. The Instrument Phrase occurs only in the Instrument Grameme

e.g.    4    4      3 3    4      3 nga    doh      nuga    eh    zi      "a bit unwilling he to admit" (Instrument      (Verb phrase) (N)      page 4 line 9,10

I                    P                    A

It consists of an Instrumentality grameme manifested by the particle nga<sup>4</sup> and an Instrument grameme manifested by a noun or a noun phrase

nga<sup>4-3</sup>    do<sup>4h</sup>      "a bit"      page 4      line 10
(ngo)      (N)
Instrumentality      Instrument

2.4 The Relation-axis phrase may occur in Spatial grameme,

Subject grameme and Complement grameme. In this text, however, we only find it occurring in the Spatial grameme eg.

This phrase contains a Relation (R) grameme which is filled by a simple Relator or a Relator which is a Hyper-morpheme and an

3.4. The Clause Clause. Clause Clause (CC·CC) Construction

The clause clause. clause clause (cc.cc) construction contains two clauses in para taxis followed by two other clauses in parataxis (See page 3 line 7)

3.5. The Clause Combinations including subordinate $si^3 si^4$ clause

These clause combinations consist of the following patterns:

Peter was going along herding hogs. He was a hired man. The rich man and owner of the animals came along behind. Then Peter said to the richman and owner of the animals "All the hogs are stuck in the mud." But it wasn't true. He had cut off the hogs' tails and had stood up the tails one by one on the surface of the mud-hole. Then he said that all the hogs were stuck in the mud --said he to the rich man and owner. He said that he had pulled hard on their tails. He said that their tail kept breaking off. Then the rich man and owner arrived. And he said to Peter "Pull out my hogs." "I would pull out the hogs, but they won't be any good" said Peter "They've fallen for good into the mud" said he. He had cut off their tails. So a great many of them got lost. He had cut off their tails. He had stood them up in the mud. And the rich man, the owner, really believed it. And the rich man himself pulled hard on their tails. He pulled but all that he pulled was their tails standing up in the mud. Then Peter himself ran off. The hogs remained in the forest. But he went off. He had a burro and went off.

He arrived at a certain village. He went over and sat down to eat. Then there arrived another man who said "What town do you come from?" "I'm just taking a walk with my burro" said Peter to him. "If you want to, let's make a fortune" says Peter to him. "O.K." says the other man. "Then go right now and look where my burro's standing" says Peter to him. Then the man went and looked where the burro stood and saw him. "Your burro is very fine" says he to Peter. And "Sell me your burro" says he to him. "I won't sell my burro" says Peter to him. "My burro defecates money" says Peter. "Let's go see where my burro stands" says Peter to him. Then he went with Peter and they arrived where the burro stood. Then Peter caused the burro to defecate money. Because among the corn he had put money for the animal to swallow. "It defecates money" says he to a man and the man purchased it. But it stopped defecating money. Then the man went out to look for Peter. But he couldn't find him by then.

Finally he found him the next day. "Why did you tell me that your burro defecates money" says he to Peter. "You deceived me greatly" says he to him. But "I wasn't the one one who sold you a burro" says Peter to him. "Yes you were the one" says he. But Peter was absolutely unwilling to admit that he was the one who sold the burro to him. Then Peter went off to another place and the man resigned himself. He couldn't regain his money; it was lost for good, since Peter ran off, and he couldn't find him to talk with him anymore. Then the man resigned himself and took up the burro. Because he went off for good. He couldn't find him anymore. Peter turned out onto the main trail and went off, said the people. The man went about inquiring. Then he resigned himself.
