OFFICE OF THE SECRETARY

Foreword

The islands, forests, and mountains of our country are home to many distinct cultural communities, each with its own language and tradition. Their cultures are integral pieces of the beautiful mosaic that is the Filipino nation.

We owe a debt of gratitude to our countrymen from the cultural communities. Through the centuries their customs, languages, and noble spirit have contributed to the development of our national character. As we gain greater understanding of these cultures, we can only take greater pride in the remarkable richness of our Filipino heritage.

For these reasons, it is imperative that the languages and traditions of the Filipino cultural communities be preserved. This book, in the language of a cultural community, is intended to assist in that preservation. It is designed to build reading and comprehension skills and to expand knowledge through the medium of the reader's own language. This first language approach to learning builds pride in the mother tongue and makes reading a rewarding experience. The skills and confidence thus acquired help equip the reader to pursue further education in the national language.

The Department of Education, Culture and Sports is pleased to introduce this book, the most recent in a series designed to promote literacy in the cultural communities. In serving these communities, the good of the entire nation is served.

RICARDO T. GLORIA
Secretary

Preface

This primer workbook, Basan Ta (Let's Read), has been prepared to teach the skill of reading and writing to the Tagabawa people of Davao del Sur and Cotabato provinces in the Republic of the Philippines.

The companion volume, Mistudyu Ki Masa (Let's Study to Read), is a pre-reading workbook designed to teach pre-reading skills including the numbers one through ten with a brief introduction of numbers to 100.

The letters of the Tagabawa alphabet are: a, á, b, d, é, g, h, i, k, l, m, n, ng, ó, p, r, s, t, u, w, y and glottal stop. The glottal stop is symbolized only in word final position. These letters closely represent their counterparts in the National Language with the exception of three vowels symbolized as á (schwa), é (pronounced as the letter a in the English alphabet), and ó (pronounced similarly to the vowel sound in the English word caught).

Each letter is introduced using phonics and is practiced in controlled syllable, word, and story drills. Writing is taught to reinforce reading skills. Instructions for teaching are inserted between the pages of the primer in copies available for teachers. The student's book does not include teaching instructions.

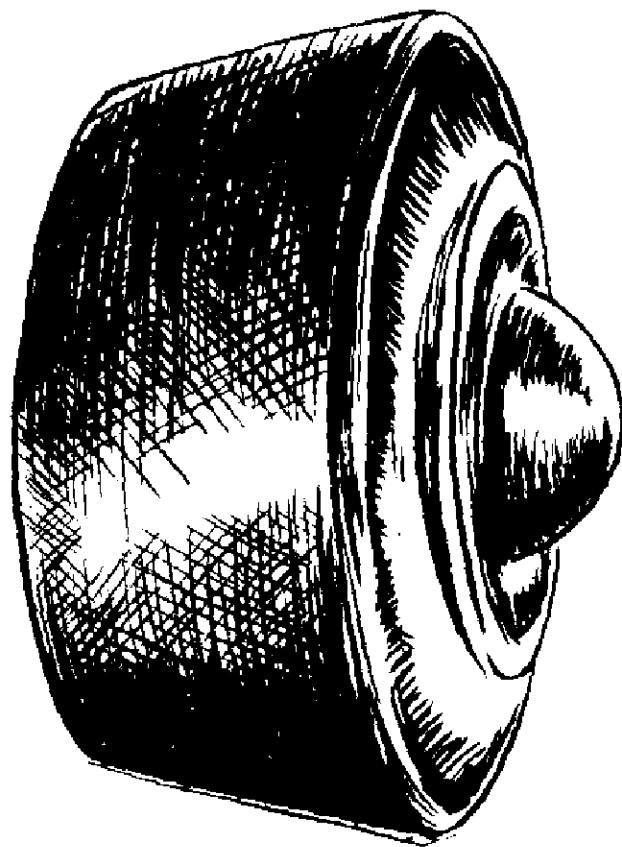

The pre-reading workbook and the primer workbook were prepared in a workshop conducted by Aida Binayao of the Translator's Association of the Philippines in 1993. The lessons, drills and stories were prepared by Peligrina Lambac with assistance from Corazon Eying and in consultation with Lillian Underwood and Lauretta DuBois of the Summer Institute of Linguistics.

Directions for teaching this book are given in the teacher's edition.
